— REFLECTION —

Easter comes...we shall no longer look for him among the dead. He calls to us to follow, to believe in our hearts that the people of this world will someday love one another.

Really

*Love one another...On Easter morning, let us in chorus sing:
'This is the day the Lord has made; Let us rejoice and be glad in it!'
And then with Mary, let us run to tell the others: We have seen Jesus!
-Ann Weems*

For some, Easter is all about God's victory over death. It was for me when I was a child. My beliefs went something like this: Before Jesus, when we died there was nothing. Now because of Jesus, when we die we have eternal life. This may or may not be true. But for me, at least now in my life, it does not matter. It once comforted me but now I find it too limiting. Is this really all there was to Jesus?

Over the years I have come to believe that it is Jesus' life that matters most. Not his death and not even his Resurrection. Now, I believe that as Christians, it is our call to live THIS life here on earth following the way of Christ. If resurrection means anything it means that the life of radical love Jesus embodied; the vision for humanity he lived and died for, remains alive and well and I, 2000 years later, can choose to be a part of Resurrection Living. We can be Resurrection People.

Resurrection People, who live this life to the fullest recognize that it is a precious gift. It does not mean we wait around for the time after death when our "real" life begins. We are called to make heaven a reality here on earth: speaking truth to power, caring for the least among us and advocating for systemic change in a system that keeps some people in the margins. As Resurrection people we strive for this heaven here on earth because we are a community that recognizes the precious gift of life in another, from the least to the greatest. We recognize the humanity of all people, even those with whom we disagree.

Resurrection Life informs our living as people who follow the way of the Risen Christ, not a dead hero, but a living Savior who appears whenever we experience new life in places in the world and in our lives where death tries to have the final word. Resurrection Living is possibility, not probability living. It is the life of faith that proclaims the Light and Life of Christ in a broken and wounded world.
